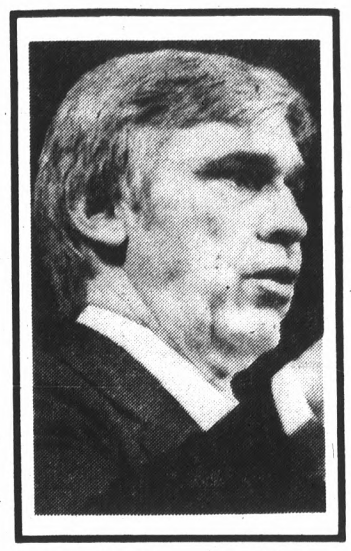
A Cold Wind Blew

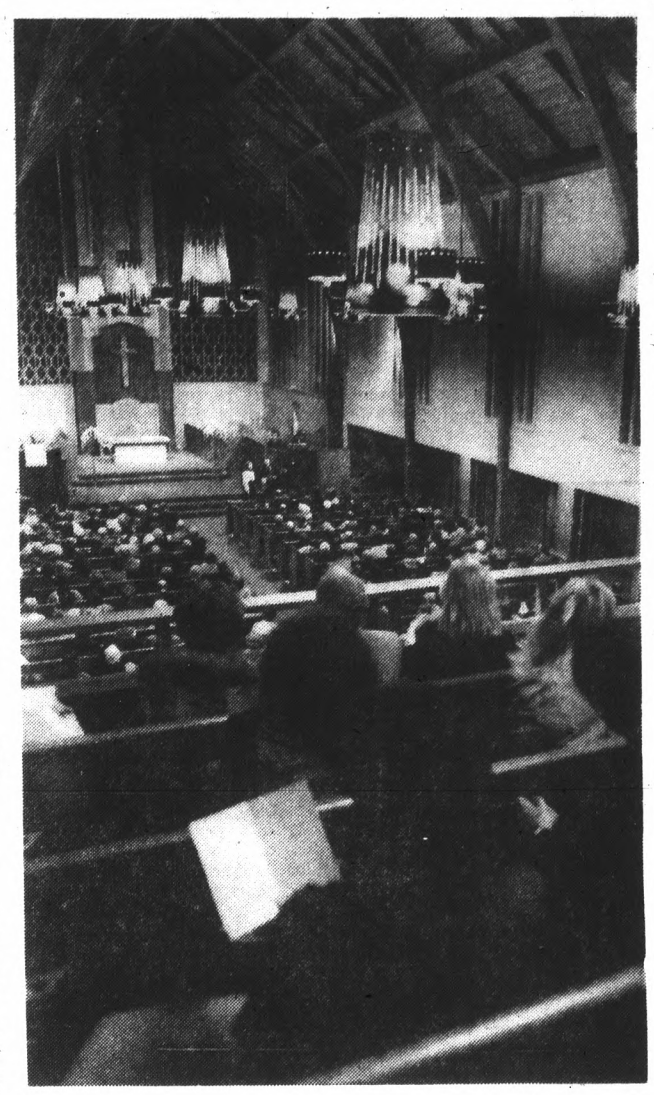


And People Died

In January and February of 1978, the wind blew. It blew even more fiercely than normal, battering the coast, as at left, and felling dozens of trees up and down the Peninsula.

The storms of nature were as nothing, though, when compared with the savage assault upon the spirit which was to stab county residents when winter again came around.

The first blow as news of the assassination Nov. 18 of Democratic Congressman Leo J. Ryan, above, at the Peoples Temple commune in Jonestown, Guyana.



PROP. 13 PASSES

"Due to the effects of Proposition 13" became one of the most common and oft-repeated phases to issue forth from municipal and county governments following the June 6 passage of the property-tax-slashing measure authored by Paul Gann and the irrepressible Howard Jarvis, above right.

Schools counted themselves among those to suffer most severely "due to the effects of Proposition 13".

Those problems were perhaps best demonstrated in the North County, where Jeffersn High School District teachers went out on strike at the beginning of the school year in September. The negotiations, even after teachers returned to the classroom, dragged on for weeks.

A Lot of Them

While citizens throughout the country were trying to assimilate the fact that a United States congressman had been murdered, rumors of a bizarre and great tragedy began creeping out of the jungle surrounding Jonestown. Then it was known, if not understood — more than 900 persons, many of them children, were dead in a murder-suicide ritual.

In Burlingame, above right, a memorial service was held Dec. 14 for those local residents who did not survive the Guyana horror.

While still going over in their minds the strange cult of the Rev. Jim Jones in far-off Guyana, Peninsula residents were stunned to numbness Nov. 27 when George Moscone, mayor of nearby big-sister-city San Francisco, and Supervisor Harvey Milk, were gunned down at City Hall.

Another death — among many of this past year — which shook country residents was that of San Mateo Mayor John Condon. At the time of his death, Oct. 4, Condon retained that which he most enjoyed, the opportunity to serve the people of his city.

But the Sun Came Through

Through it all, God, nature — whatever force beyond the comprehension of man which nevertheless guides him — did the commonplace and expected: He, it endured, investing the trite saying "Life goes on" with some dignity. Sept. 23, the first day of fall, proved a spectacular example of that. The supposedly subdued season was ushered in with warm and welcome splendor.

'Sewer Charges Correct'

BY TERRY DAVENPORT

Charges made to sewer users in Daly City and Colma by the North San Mateo County Sanitation District were not erroneous, according to the outside consultant who calculated the bills for the district.

Robert Eppler of Resources, Engineering and Management in South San Francisco explained that he "just adjusted the volumes" on sewer bills "to match normal winter consumption in the district, because last winter had lower than normal winter consumption."

He said he used a consistent formula in calculating the 22,000 sewer charges that users saw listed on their recent property tax bills.

The fact that those bills are, on the average, 28 percent higher than the rate that the Board of Directors authorized does not mean, Eppler said, that the district is collecting surplus revenues.

The consultant explained that district merely charged sewer users the amount of money that it will take to operate the district in the coming year: $1.5 million.

Although David Gehre, outgoing manager of the district, and Eppler each seem to feel the other is responsible for letting the higher charges go through without board approval, both agree that the district has the right to hang onto the extra $400,000 that users were billed.

"I see no reason why the district should have to refund the $400,000, because it will just have to go out and get that money next year," Gehre said.

He suggested putting the additional funds in a trust fund and slashing users' charges by a proportionate amount in subsequent billings.

Gehre also agrees that sewer users were treated consistently when the controversial bills were figured.

Why, then, did outside accountant Richard Dwyer recently announce that his test sampling of 160 bills showed that sewer users were charged an average of 28 percent too much and that the overcharges ranged from 7 to 59 percent?

Eppler said the answer is simple: Dwyer used different information in calculating the bills.

At the board's request, Dwyer found the actual figures of water consumption on two water readings made between November 1977 and February 1978, then multiplied them by the rate the board had authorized: 59 cents per 100 cubic feet.

It wasn't easy to find those figures. Dwyer had to go to water meter readers' books, then match those figures with properties listed in the city clerk's office, then trace those properties to the actual tax bills in the county clerk's office.

The procedure was, Dwyer said, "a horrendous, time-consuming job."

But it's easy for a resident to find that information by checking his water bill for the November 1977-February 1978 period.

Dwyer had to go through this time-consuming process because, as Eppler previously had found, the original water consumption figures had been wiped off Daly City's computer as a matter of routine.

When Eppler calculated the bills last fall, he used the most recent water use data available on the computers, which varied from May through June 1978. Then Eppler added a factor to reduce those figures to a level consistent with winter water consumption.

The factor ranged from .82 for water readings made between March and June 1978 to 1, for readings made during the correct winter period (November 1977-February 1978).

For example, if a person's readings were made between March and June 1978, Eppler multiplied the water use figure by a correction factor of .82, meaning that the person was charged 82 percent of the amount.

Figuring that the 59 cents per 100 cubic feet rate wouldn't generate the amount of revenue necessary to operate the district next year, Eppler also multiplied by another correction factor of 1.47, then multiplied by the 59 cent rate.

Since 1.47 multiplied by 59 cents equals 87.91, critics have charged that Eppler, in essence, increased the rate from 59 cents to 88 cents per 100 cubic feet. He insists that no 88-cent rate ever was applied to a property.

The directors had directed billings to be based on winter water use because they believed the winter figures more accurately reflect sewer use. During the summer more water is sprinkled on lawns and used in other "pure" ways that do not necessitate processing through the sewer system.

To see how those two methods of calculating bills differ, suppose that an imaginary Daly City resident, John Q. Public, used 41 units of water between November 1977 and February 1978. (One unit of water equals 100 cubic feet.)

Using Dwyer's method, Public's water usage rate first would have been multiplied by three (since November-February represents only one-third of the year), then multiplied by 59 cents, like this:

41 x 3 x .59 72.57

Public would have been charged $72.57.

Imagine that the most recent water meter readings available to Eppler were made between March and June 1978 and showed that Public had used 50 units of water.

Using Eppler's formula, Public would have been charged like this:

50 x 3 x .82 x 1.49 x .59 108.13

In other words, Public would have been billed $108.13— 33 percent more than using Dwyer's formula.

Eppler advises sewer users merely to check their water bills to see that they are "in the ballpark" and consistent with those of their neighbors.

He said most single family homeowners were charged between $45 and $75 on recent property tax bills.

One problem, he explained, is that some residents have been charged for sewer use on vacant lots that have no sewer connections.

To date, about 350 sewer users have demanded adjustments on their bills.

Eppler said some customers are carrying things too far.

"One person argued about a 12-cent correction. To mail the refund check costs 15 cents," he noted ruefully.

Consultant Says He'll Offer Two Ways Out

Richard Dwyer, the outside consultant hired by the North San Mateo County Sanitation District to find a way of rectifying the district's overbilling of 22,000 customers, said Tuesday he'll propose two solutions to the board when it meets next Monday:

• To put the approximately $400,000 overcharged into a reserve account that would be applied against next year's charges

• To refund the money to individual sewer users.

He said the second alternative would be "very, very costly. I think it would cost $100,000 to make those refunds."

Dwyer said the district's attorney, James Morton, has determined that both alternatives are legal.

But Morton warned the directors that they will have to be careful to weed out the approximately 350 persons who already have received refunds from the district, so that they don't get double refunds or credits on next year's bills.

Board Rapped

Directors of the North San Mateo County Sanitation District violated the Brown Act by not giving the press 24 hours advance notification of the Dec. 22 special meeting at which they named Peter Archuleta as manager of the district.

A secretary in the district's office said notices of the meeting were mailed to the press Dec. 20 and were hand-delivered to the district's Board of Directors Dec. 21.

Probably due to the heavy Christmas mail, the notice was not received by this paper prior to the Dec. 22 meeting.

The Brown Act forbids a majority of a body of public officials to hold secret meetings.

Archuleta, the former city administrator of Clayton, Calif., will become manager Jan. 8 at a annual salary of $33,900.

David Gehre will continue to receive his annual salary of $30,000 through Jan. 31.

Board Chairman William Schumacher explained that Archuleta's salary is just $75 per month more than Gehre's because Gehre also receives a separate car allowance.

He said Gehre will be training Archuleta and finishing up a "special assignment" by the district in his final weeks.

Folks Like Their Quiet SSF Enclave

By HEIDI VAN ZANT

Tucked away on the fringes of South San Francisco is a small community that looks like it belongs in the country.

Country Club Estates is a unique place, with happy residents, lots of room for kids and animals to roam and no sewer system or sidewalks.

The area is unincorporated and technically under county jurisdiction, although residents do rely on South San Francisco police and fire departments for services.

Residents of this suburban hamlet maintain they have the best of both worlds: an easy access to nearby cities while living a life in the country.

Several residents describe Country Club Estates as a quiet place removed from reality.

Ada Brown said she and her husband moved there in 1947, because they wanted openness and space around them.

"You drive into your driveway at night and there's the world falling off around the edges," said Mrs. Brown, who along with her husband owns a Millbrae stationery store.

They don't mind the lack of sidewalks and street lights, she said, adding that one of the reasons they like the area is that, "it smells just like the country."

The only disadvantage of living there, she said, is not being connected to a sewer system.

Another couple who also has lived in Country Club Estates for a long time is Jack and Burnette Donahue, who moved there from San Francisco 25 years ago.

"It's nice living there," Mrs. Donahue said. "It's secluded. You can make as much noise as you want to."

They used to raise vegetables and ducks, but they no longer do that, she said.

Her husband said he likes his neighborhood because it is safe and secluded.

Mrs. Donahue said she also values her privacy, adding, "You can go out in your bathrobe in the backyard and no one can see you."

The couple, who own a marine rubber company in San Francisco, also noted that the commute to their work is an easy one from Country Club Estates.

Gladys Beck, who with her husband Ralph has lived in Country Club Estates 28 years, said she moved there because of her four children.

"I wanted them to have ground to play on," she said.

Although they are grown and no longer live at home, she and her husband continue to live there, she said, because "I'm not smothered in. I have freedom to alk around the yard."

When they first moved to their home, they used to leave the windows and doors unlocked. Their home is locked at night now, although the Becks said they still feel very safe in their home.

"I feel more safe out here because it's out in the open," Mrs. Beck said. "People don't bother you where there's not a lot of houses."

They, like their neighbors, have a large home and yard. They used to have a horse on their one-acre lot.

Asked when they will move, Mrs. Beck answered quickly: "I have no intention of ever selling it."

Charles Cervelli, who has lived in his home for 20 years, also said he found Country Club Estates a good place to raise his four children.

"I like the country," said Cervelli, who has two Shetland ponies in a fenced area behind his home.

He too said he likes the privacy Country Club Estates gives him. "Your neighbors are far apart," he added.

All of the residents were aware of the possibility that the area soon may be annexed to South San Francisco, but there was no consensus on the subject.

Because the area is less than 100 acres, the county can annex it to South San Francisco without the approval of the residents.

City Planner Bill Costanzo said the city is not anxious to annex the area, but to be prepared for that possibility, he has drawn up a proposed rural estates zone district that would protect the area.

With this new zone, minimum lot sizes of 20,000 square foot would be required and various kinds of animals would be permitted.

Most homes in Country Club Estates are on one-acre lots.

The City Council will be considering this new zone later this month.

A Meaningful 'Year of the Child'?

By ARVILLE FINACOM

Perspective

A resolution passed by the United Nations General Assembly two years ago designated 1979 officially as the "International Year of the Child" in all UN member nations. Although no worldwide or national conferences are planned and the suggestions for observances offered by UNICEF as lead agency are by no means exhaustive, the year holds promise of becoming a watershed one for a quarter of the world's population as youth-oriented groups everywhere seek to make IYC meaningful.

What is IYC to accomplish? Those involved agree its primary purpose is to focus attention on children — "to put them in the only place appropriate for them — the center of world concern."

Another function of the year, beyond consciousness raising, involves the planning and implementating of programs which begin to treat all children as what they really are — the most important link in humanity's survival chain.

As guideline for the year's activities, participants plan to use the United Nations Declaration of the Rights of the Child, published some 20 years ago by the world organization. The declaration gives each child "the Right to: affection, love and understanding; adequate nutrition and medical care; free education; full opportunity for play and recreation; a name and nationality; special care, if handicapped; be among the first to receive relief in times of disaster; be a useful member of society and to develop individual abilities; be brought up in a spirit of peace and universal brotherhood; enjoy these rights regardless to race, color, sex, religion, national or social origin."

Communities intent on providing the best for their children are encouraged to celebrate IYC by inviting citizens of all ages to take renewed interest in local children. Ask: What are the needs? What programs and services are available directly to children? Are there sufficient nursery and day care centers, recreational programs, library and cultural facilities? Is there easily accessible medical — both physical and medical — dental and nutritional guidance for children and their parents? Is there effort to make parents aware of these services?

Another way in which community group are urged to participate in IYC is to organize and publicize workshops and seminars in parenting skills not only for parents of young children but for those whose children are grown and especially for those of high school and college age who will become parents ultimately.

It's a truism that children are only so safe in a

A Dog's Ear Mites

By D. R. BARNETT, DVM

Question: My dog is 8 months old and he has ear mites. Everytime I use alcohol to clean the wax in his ears he rolls on the floor and rubs his head on the carpet. I don't know why? Note: I don't put alcohol in his ear canal. I read about this method in a book. J.C.

Answer: You might try using mineral oil to clean his ears instead of alcohol. If there are any open sores or abrasions in the ear the alcohol will sting, causing your dog to rub his ears on the carpet. Besides cleaning his ears, you should also be using medication to kill the ear mites. This is available from your veterinarian.

Question: Do you give animals blood transfusions? If so, di they have blood types like humans? Do you keep the blood under refrigeration and how is it administered to animals? Is there blood available for both cats and dogs? L. G.

Answer: Blood transfers are given to animals when indicated, just as in human medicine, and there are different blood types also. The blood can be stored under refrigeration for a few days and it is administered intravenously using equipment and tubing very similar to that used with humans. Whole blood for transfusions is not commercially available for cats or dogs, so I frequently use my own animals as donors.

Question: My dog has a coat which is dull looking and rough. Do you have any suggestions that can improve his coat condition? I brush him every day. Would a conditioner help and if so what would be the best kind to buy? R. C.

Answer: Many conditioners are available and I couldn't advise you to use any specific one without knowing the ingredients of it. Dogs require essential fatty acids in their diet to promote a healthy coat. These fatty acids are linoleic, linolenic and arachidonic acids — so any dietary conditioner that you choose should contain these fatty acids. Daily brushing is usually very helpful but should be both thorough and vigorous. I have not seen much benefit from applying conditioners to the coat.

Dr. David R. Barnett, a Colma veterinarian and Animal Forum columnist for this newspaper, has been elected president of the California Veterinary Medical Association and chairman of the Board of Governors for 1979, on which he represents San Mateo and Santa Clara counties.

culture where laws, written or traditional, protect them. Hubert Humphrey said, "The moral test of government is how it treats those who are in the dawn of life . . . " It does not speak too well of a people which treats its young as "property."

Yet the thought of children as "personal property" gave impetus to the emerging Children's Rights Movement, which deals also with a great variety of juvenile freedoms and responsibilities. Increasingly, mass media displays the bruised, battered, starved and neglected bodies of children. In the United States, the National Center of Child Abuse and Neglect estimates up to 200,000 children are beaten annually, some three quarters of a million more are starved and/or deprived of clothing and shelter, an additional 100,000 suffer sexual abuse and at least 2,000 die each year from causes documented as abuse or neglect.

Not only is more stringent child-oriented legislation needed, say the advocates of Children's Rights, but legislators need to be awakened to the fact that children, because they are non-voting constituents, have few adult voices speaking solely for them. A group organized to function as children's advocates insofar as federal legislation is concerned is the Children's Defense Fund headquartered in Washington, D.C. (1520 New Hampshire Ave., NW, 20036) which targets its legislative efforts "on issues where we have particular expertise, can make a difference and will represent a point of view that will not otherwise be heard."

The mechanics also exist within state and national PTA groups to make a difference legislatively — "to secure adequate laws for the care and protection of children and youth" as one of the National PTA objects says. Annually, PTA legislative advocating efforts carried on by volunteer lobbyists in state capitals and in Washington, help support the rights of all children to wholesome, growth-enhancing environments.

But no public interest lobbying efforts ever are successful without grassroots support. During IYC, individuals are urged to let school boards, city councils, recreation departments, state and federal legislators understand the meaning of priority placement for laws, rules and regulations affecting our child population.

In a list of 23 "IYC Ideas," available from the U.S. Committee for UNICEF-IYC, 331 East 38th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10016, a number of child-centered activities are listed. One suggests that children study the UN Declaration of the Rights of the Child, then write a version to be presented publicly at a school event or city meeting.

Make a Game Pay Off

During the past few years the game scene has been changing. While there are still a large number of new, creative, conventional board games marketed yearly, there has been a growing trend towards electronic and computer based games.

Many of these new products are quite good and have met with enthusiastic public approval. Others have been of lesser quality and probably will not stand the test of time.

One electronic game that has a lot to offer is P.E.G.S. (Parker Electronic Game System). Designed by Parker Brothers, the game is for 2 players aged 7 to 14. P.E.G.S. is really a game full of games — 15 in all — which vary in degree of difficulty. They are all played on a simple playing unit which is a two-sided grid that stands vertically between the two players.

The playing pieces are orange pegs and yellow markers. The grid is made up of six rows and six columns. The rows are lettered A through F and the columns are numbered one through six. The point where a row meets a column is called a location. There are 36 locations on the grid.

This simple unit which requires only a 9-volt battery to operate is the basis for a world of fun. Some of the games are easy; some are more difficult but they all require players to think, formulate strategy and make use of memory.

For this reason all of the games in P.E.G.S. have an educational benefit. They encourage children to exercise their minds and develop their mental skills.

Here is an example of one of the simple games. It is called Free-For-All. The object of the game is to end up with more pegs on the grid than your opponent. Players take turns inserting one orange peg at a time on their side of the grid. If they place a peg in the same location as their oponent's peg, an electronic alarm will sound and the player who is placing the peg must remove it at once. If no alarm sounds the peg can remain in the grid. The game continues until four alarms are sounded in succession. When this happens, each of the players counts the pegs on his side of the grid and the player with the most pegs is the winner.

As I mentioned, the games vary in complexity. Five games are designed for beginners, five for intermediate players and five are specifically for advanced level competitors.

There are games with intriguing titles such as "Rapid Transit", "Hostage", and "Space Attack", and games with familiar names such as "Tic Tac Toe", "Leap Frog", Football and Soccer.

For the truly creative individual, P.E.G.S. offers the opportunity to invent more games. The possibilities are almost endless.

There are many fine electronic games on the market but for players aged 7 to 14, P.E.G.S. is an offering that will prove difficult to beat.

Harper Wins Assault Badge

Spec. 4 Earl S. Harper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Harper, 504 B St., Colma, recently was presented the Air Assault Badge upon graduation from the Air Assault School at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Trainees learned to rapidly and safely exit a helicopter from a variety of difficult situations. Harper entered the Army in May 1975.

SAN MATEO COUNTY'S LEADING DAILY NEWSPAPER

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD JOHNSON

Sights Set For Great New Year

"We just hope 1979 will be as good to us as '78," is the sentiment of many restaurants, clubs, hotels and Nevada entertainment spas. As in years past, they are preparing for another big year and resolve to maintain the high standards of their service, food and entertainment. To get the New Year off right, "Bright Lights" would like to wish one and all a Happy, Healthy and Prosperous 1979!

—Lloyd Johnson

MANY BENEFIT

Planning Class at Hospital

Mary's Help Hospital will offer classes in natural family planning beginning Jan. 10 at 7 p.m. in the hospital auditorium. A $7 fee entitles participants to lecture sessions, pesonal counseling and intructional materials.

Natural family planning, as taught at the Mary's Help Natural Family Planning Center, is based on the observation of cervical mucus which indicates fertile and infertile times. Once the woman has learned to identify the changes in her own reproductive cycle, the decision to achieve or avoid pregnancy is up to the couple.

Mary's Help Hospital, sponsored and operated by the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, is at 1900 Sullivan Ave., Daly City. For more information call 992-4000, ext. 434.

Nell Norton

Good morning, good cooks.

Traditional English Cornish Pastries, steaming with lean beef, potatoes and rich brown gravy, create an old world charm popular among young and old alike. Cornish Pastries are an excellent way to use the remainder of a Sunday roast, suggest the California Beef Council. The flavorful beef and potatoes portray English pub eating at its finest.

Each round pastry portion is layered with cubed lean cooked beef, cubed raw potatoes, sliced onion, parsley and rich brown gravy. The pastry is folded over to form a semi-circle, and the corners are crimped to seal the packet together. The top of each pastry is pierced with a fork to let steam escape while baking.

CORNISH PASTRIES

Pastry for 2 crust pie
1½ cups cubed cooked roast beef
1 cup cubed raw potatoes
1/3 cup thinly sliced onion
3 tablespoons minced parsley
Salt and pepper
1/3 cup rich brown gravy

Divide dough into 4 portions. Roll each portion into a circle about 8 inches in diameter. Combine the one and one-half cups cooked roast beef, one cup cubed raw potatoes, third cup sliced onion, three tablespoons minced parsley, salt and pepper to taste and one-third cup rich brown gravy.

Divide the filling among the four pie crusts. Moisten edges of circles with water. Fold the pastry over to form a half circle and press the edges together to seal. Crimp edges. Pierce pastry with a fork and transfer to baking sheet.

Bake at 425-degree for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 30 minutes longer.

Makes 4 pastries.

INFLATION FIGHTING ideas

Join with your Safeway Store in the FIGHT AGAINST INFLATION . . .

President Carter has asked his Cabinet officers to take aggressive action to slow the rise in consumer prices. They were asked for specific suggestions on what consumers themselves can do to cope with the problem of inflation.

The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs has issued guidelines to help consumers minimize the impact of inflation on their daily lives.

Safeway pledges full cooperation with the U.S. Government in battling this number one domestic problem. As tangible evidence of that support, Safeway will publish weekly inflation-fighting ideas, suggesting ways in which you and your family can shop better for less money.

Some of the subjects to be covered are: Saving on "private labels" such as Safeway Brands; Making Unit Pricing work for you; Cooking from "scratch"; Seasonal produce bargains; Best use of your freezer; Advertised and unadvertised specials; Planning family meals, and many others.

Next week, #1 in this on-going series:
"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

together, we can be

First East-West Tilt Almost Wasn't

Le Pacini

The upcoming Shrine East-West game seems to have been around forever (actually, it's been around "only" since 1925), and to have been a natural from the beginning, as not only the country's first collegiate all-star extravaganza, but also as the granddaddy of all charity games.

But it almost never got off the ground, and wouldn't have, had it not been for some luck, and the emergence of an extraordinary man named Bill Coffman. As a matter of fact, it actually grew out of a baseball game between the San Francisco Shriners and the Elks several years prior to 1925.

Receipts for those annual baseball games played mainly by pot-bellied Shrine and Elks Club members were given casually to charities, and the receipts were on the level of the quality of the games.

Capt. E. Jack Spaulding, a Shriner, reasoned that the games never would be big draws because San Franciscans were used to seeing solid baseball professionals in action, but that they weren't all that accustomed to seeing good football players in action, and especially from all parts of the nation.

Sports And Recreation

So, basically, the idea for a college all-star game was born.

The Shriners voted $10,000 for purposes of promoting the game, and member Sam Goodman made a proposal that was accepted quickly — that all profits from the game be given to the San Francisco unit of the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children.

That part was easy. Then the troubles began. Spaulding, who was put in charge of handling the selection and care of the West team, naturally turned to members of California's "Wonder Team," which then was in its hey-day. But the Pacific Coast Conference (now the Pac-10) ruled that any students playing the game would lose all further eligibility in intercollegiate competition. And then the Olympic Club, whose football roster included several of the college players who had been asked to participate in the game, announced its own post-season game, which would have eaten into the roster of the West team.

The Shriners countered with new rules — that the game be played strictly on an amateur basis, coaches and players to serve without pay, unlike the original plan. This was satisfactory to the Pacific Coast Conference as well as to other colleges throughout the country, and then was approved by the NCAA. Rather than compete against the now sanctioned charity game, the Olympic Club cancelled its game and President W.F. Humphrey placed the club's trainers and equipment men at the disposal of the West team.

As plans for the game progressed, William F. Coffman, the swimming commissioner of the Olympic Club who had been asked to entertain and care for the visiting players, became the guiding light of the event, and the Shriners were so impressed with his performance in eventually pulling everything together that he subsequently was named managing director and remained in that capacity for years.

Still, difficulties continued for that first game. Less than a month from the kickoff it was discovered that the game would cost twice the $10,000 the Shriners had allocated. There was little advance sale and publicity had been almost negligible.

It was at ths point that Coffman really took charge. He did it with a deluge of publicity: Speakers appearing at the lodge and public assemblies; posters; bill boards donated by Foster and Kleiser; trucks and loudspeakers; volunteer ticket salesmen, and Brick Muller, the great Cal end, caught a football dropped by Cal halfback Tut Imlay from the 23rd floor of the then-new telephone building.

There were on-going problems, however. While West coaches Babe Hollingberry, Pesky Sprott and "Fat" Latham had given earlier announcements to the press of their roster, the East had provided almost no information, as word got around the East coach 'Navy" Bill Ingram couldn't be bothered with such details when he was busy coaching.

And then a wire story out of Chicago reported that Ingram had a "team of football stars" had boarded a train headed for San Francisco "to play a charity game."

Luckily, the story carried a list of the players, which Coffman copied. It was the first time anyone knew for sure that there really was an East squad.

Even after both teams became ensconsed in San Francisco, there were so many rumors floating around that the promotion was a failure that several VIPs whose names had been in the program called Coffman and requested that they be removed.

On the evening before the game, the weather man predicted possible rain. Coffman was so nervous that he didn't go to bed that night, watching the skies for telltale signs.

But the dawn brought sunshine, and 25,000 fooball fans showed up at the old, long-gone Ewing Field to provide the Shriners and the hospital with a $25,000 profit, and there hasn't, of course, been a moment trepidation about The Game since.

Bob Toledo, the former San Francisco State Little All-American quarterback (circa 1967) who recently was named head football coach of the University of the Pacific, still holds five NCAA Division II offensive records: Most total offense, game (562 yards); (340.7); most yards passing, game (568); most yards gained per game, one season (351.3); most TD passes, season (45). In addition to that single-game total offense record, Toledo also has the fifth-best such mark ever made, a 495-yarder.

Jim Sochor, another former great S.F. State QB who preceded Toledo by several years, was going into this season, the winningest active Division II coach. His Cal-Davis teams have played at a .780 clip under Sochor's eight-year tutelage.

Some surprising 49er-Raider stats:

Steve DeBerg had a lower interception percentage than Ken Stabler (.0728 against Snake's .0739).

Ken McAfee and Paul Seal combined for 43 catches for an average of 13.4 yards per reception — pretty good production for a couple of tight ends, one a rookie, on a weak passing team, Kenny Harrison, incidentally, had the best average gain per reception among 49ers, an outstanding 20.6.

The 49ers outscored opponents in the second half, 179-164. The Raiders were out-scored by opponents in the second half, 162-146.

Morris Bradshaw was supposed to bring more speed to Fred Biletnikoff's spot, yet he averaged 13.8 yards a reception to Biletnikoff's 14.3.

Art Whittington, the Raiders' rookie back, averaged only 4.6 yards per pass reception on 23 catches; the lowest average on hat many receptions that I can remember.
